

Abstract

A programmable logic device (PLD) includes configuration circuitry. The configuration circuitry is adapted to receive serial configuration data from a configuration
5 device. The configuration circuitry is further adapted to program a function of the PLD without using an input buffer to store the configuration data.